Additional Data Of little architectural value. Interesting in that it recalls the Mexican manner of building and is quite similar to work found in San Antonio. This, though, is a coincidence. Its original owner, John Munce, came from Germany in 1840. It would be interesting to know whether or not he did not come to Marshall by way of San Antonio. There were no German settlers in this part of the state and the area around San Antonio was almost entirely settled by them.
